features

- Contradicting stereotypes: reflecting on case studies of success 3
by Peter Waterhouse and Crina Virgona
To be 'positively deviant' is to live a successful life despite literacy difficulties.
- Policy-in-Practice: practitioner perspectives on ALBE in the Top End 8
by Margaret Palmer
The author talks about her policy-in-practice research for her doctoral thesis on the relationships between policy, context and professional practice.
- Building on the best: the A-Frame for non-accredited learning 14
by Karen Dymke
Here is a project that helps providers develop uniform quality, learner-centred, non-accredited courses where participants build confidence, resilience and self-worth.
- ACE Connects with learners: findings from a longitudinal study 17
by Anne Walstab
For many Language other than English learners, Adult Community Education is both a source of socialisation and a support system for preparing for work and study.

Regulars

- Practical Matters 22
When Robyn Hodge returned from a recent expedition to the world of learning, she described a mysterious 'other world' landscape that teachers and learners must map and journey together.
- Open Forum 25
Cate Thompson and Meg Curlewis give the green light to the reaccredited Diploma of Further Education and the Certificate IV in Further Education, while Robyn Hodge and Lynne Matheson give an update on the recent VALBEC planning day.
- Policy Update 29
Anyone delivering federally-funded programs like WELL or LLNP will find interesting reading in this account of a review of the National Reporting System by Lynda Wyse and her colleagues Kate Perkins and Philippa McLean.
- Foreign Correspondence 32
The Webhead story: an international, online community of language teachers and learners, written by Michael Coghlan, starring Dan Akroyd and Bill Murray.
- Beside the Whiteboard 35
Debbie Soccio talks to relative newcomers Marie Mennees and Anna de Luca about the benefits of professional development programs such as last year's Teaching Literacy: Blending the Theory with the Practice, held at Victoria University.
